11.45 – 12.45	 ADVANCED SESSION Parenting Post-Pandemic Ballroom A The last three years have seen a seismic shift in how we have lived and continue to live our lives: people ran away from the cities to avoid lockdowns and people coughing on them on the train; we had to work from home (and then we stayed); and as always, people fell in and out of love. And that's before we start talking about vaccines. How does all this fit within parenting arrangements under the Family Law Act ? How does the Court (and parties in the middle of family law litigation) deal with issues such as relocation, if employment is no longer tied to a desk? How do orders for overseas travel work if the borders might close? How does equal shared parental responsibility play out in medical issues? Does that child support agreement still work in a lockdown world? This panel discussion follows the through-lines from the Covid-19 pandemic to today to identify the hot topics in parenting cases, and what we might see in the years to come. Chair: Jamie Burreket, FLS Executive Member Speakers: Judge Anna Parker, Federal Circuit and Family Court of Australia (Division 2) Jane Miller, Elizabeth Evatt Chambers Di Simpson, Chair, Family Law Section Competency Area 4 - Substantive Law, 1 CPD Points
Ballroom B	 JUNIOR SESSION Preparing and Presenting Your Case (applications, affidavits, case outlines, position papers and the like) The role of a practitioner is to take instructions and then put the client's case forward in the best possible way. It is often a balancing act between what the client wants to say and achieve and the evidence the court needs to hear to determine any competing applications. This practical session aims to assist junior lawyers focus on how to best craft their case. The aim is to ensure that the right evidence is before the court for their client to achieve success, and to make certain the judicial officer never has to ask "where is the evidence to support that"? 13.45 – 14.45	 ADVANCED SESSION Intergenerational Wealth Ballroom A Australia will soon see one of the largest transfers of intergenerational wealth, as the Silent Generation and Baby Boomers gift or bequeath their assets to Gens X, Y, and Alpha. Past governments have even suggested that the property crisis can be solved by the bank of mum and dad. How the Courts will deal with inheritances and gifts is soon to become vitally important in many family law cases. Beyond a simple 'holistic contribution' analysis, this session considers the wide-ranging issues that this area presents. When mum and dad have passed away, questions about how that inheritance is to be characterised, whether a 'two-pool approach' can or should be adopted, and the law of family provision are all relevant. Even before those relatives have passed away, there are arguments about loans and limitation periods, equitable doctrines of resulting and constructive trusts, and even how best to draft a Last Will and Testament to keep their estate out of the hands of that pesky former spouse. Perhaps nothing is certain except for death, taxes, and divorce? Chair: Dr Robin Smith, FLS Executive member Speakers: The Hon Justice Penelope Kari, Federal Circuit and Family Court of Australia (Division 1) Mark Hoffmann KC, Bar Chambers Jill Miller, Norman Waterhouse Lawyers Competency Area 4 - Substantive Law, 1 CPD Points
Ballroom B	 JUNIOR SESSION Engaging with the Courts and the Profession (Ethical and Practical Tips) Lawyers are required to interact with the Courts and their opponents regularly. In doing so we are guided and constrained by ethical rules and considerations. Sometimes the application of these rules is unclear and the nature of the interaction, especially with some opponents, is challenging. This session aims to equip junior lawyers with some tools to avoid conflict and make the practical task of dealing with courts and colleagues more streamlined and effective.
